

Purchase of Part of Wards Estate, Loch Lomond & Trossachs National Park

RSPB Scotland acquired part of the Wards Estate, an area of land on the south east bank of Loch Lomond, which is of European importance for nature conservation.

Image

Land at the Wards Estate, part of the Loch Lomond nature reserve

Region

Scotland

Grant awarded

£172,000

Year awarded

2011

Related News

Future of nature reserve on Loch Lomond secured

Situated close to Gartocharn at the south east shore of Loch Lomond, the estate is home to a rich variety of wildlife that inhabit the woodlands, mires, fens, grasslands and floodplain of the River Endrick, making this one of the most designated wildlife sites in the UK.