

The Lost Papers of Thomas Manning

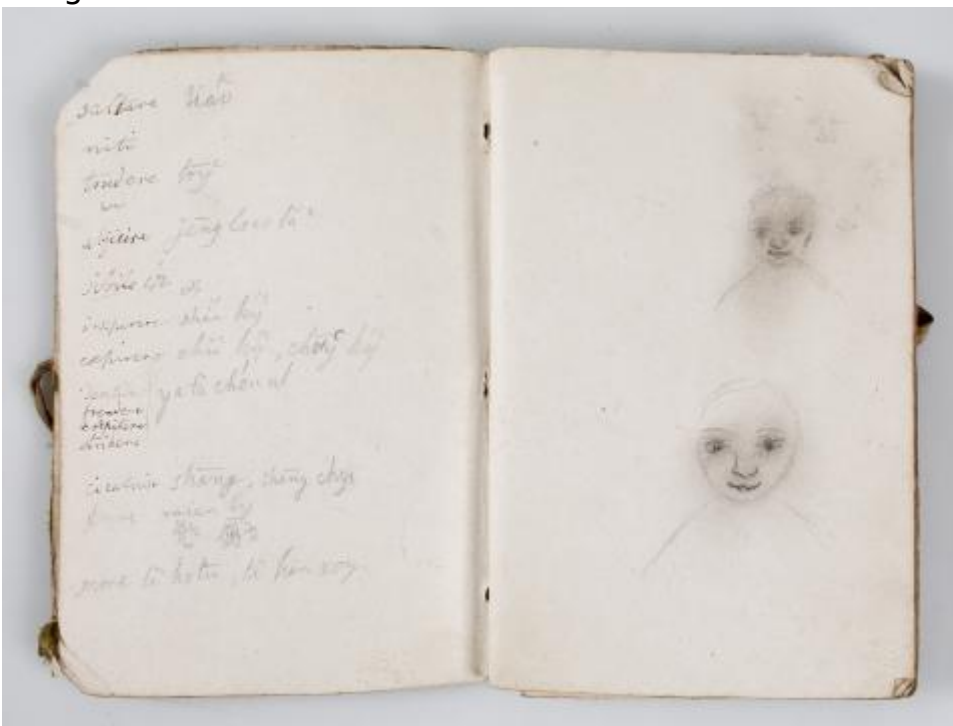

Thomas Manning (1772-1840) was one of Britain's first scholars of Chinese language and culture. He was also the first British person to enter Lhasa and meet the Dalai Lama. This archive charts his attempts to visit China, his trip to Tibet and studies of Chinese language and culture. This archive consists of over 400 letters to and from Manning, papers, diaries and notebooks. It also includes the manuscript of Narrative of the Journey of Thomas Manning to Lhasa, which was published posthumously in 1876.

Image

Letters and notes from one of the notebooks Manning kept in China

Image

Pencil sketches of the five-year-old Dalai Lama, by Thomas Manning

Nation/region

London

Grant awarded

£52,000

Award date

22/07/2015

Related News

Saved for the nation: Archive of Thomas Manning, first Briton to meet the Dalai Lama

The Royal Asiatic Society has acquired the archive of sinologist Thomas Manning (1772-1840), one of Britain's first scholars of Chinese language and culture